Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of various factors on the growth of the plant species. The study was conducted in a controlled environment over a period of six months. The factors studied include light intensity, temperature, and nutrient availability. The results show that light intensity has a significant positive effect on growth, while temperature and nutrient availability have less pronounced effects. The study also found that the growth rate of the plant species is highest when all three factors are optimized.

STORY OF FULTON COUNTY, ILLINOIS

Renowned far beyond its borders as the locale of Spoon River Anthology, a great literary classic, and as the site of Dickson Mounds State Park, one of the most important surviving earthworks of the mysterious "mound builders" of prehistoric America, Fulton County, at the confluence of the Spoon and Illinois rivers, in the beginning was so large that it embraced all of the northern part of Illinois---including Chicago. That was more than a hundred years ago.

At that early date, settlers living in Chicago who wanted to pay taxes, secure a marriage license, obtain a tavern permit or receive approval to run a ferry, had to journey by canoe or horseback almost 200 miles southwestward to Lewistown, seat of Fulton County. Another settlement in Fulton County then was Peoria, which today is the second largest city in Illinois.

But Fulton County did not long retain this vast, and afterwards richest and most populous, portion of the Prairie State. It was greatly reduced in size after Peoria County was organized in 1825, and, in the years immediately following, became gradually smaller until its present dimensions of 874 square miles.

If smaller than when first established in 1823, Fulton County nonetheless flourished and grew in population, and today the total number of human beings in the county is 43,716. Its largest city, Canton, has a population of 11,927, of which a sizable portion is employed in the vast branch works there of the International Harvester Company.

Mysterious "Mound Builders"

About fifty years ago, a descendant of Willima Dickson, early Fulton County settler, began to level what he thought was a useless hillock on the Dickson farm near Spoon River, just south of Lewistown. On finding a great many skeletons in the "Hill," as well as curious stone implements and unusual pottery pieces, he stopped digging, notified leading American archeologists, and thereby made possible the preservation of one of the richest archeological "finds" in the Midwest.

Here is an outstanding example of the many strange burial mounds erected in Fulton County, and in other parts of the Upper Mississippi Valley, by the mysterious "mound builders" of prehistoric America. At first believed to have been a lost race (some said they might have been "the lost tribes of Israel"), these mound builders, scholars are now agreed, were but the forerunners of the Indian tribes that Columbus found when he discovered America in 1492.

The mound builders were a more skillful people than the later Indians. As we learn from Rediscovering Illinois by Fay-Cooper Cole and Thorne Deuel (both of the University of Chicago), an authoritative work that tells of their archeological researches in Fulton County, the Dickson Mound contained innumerable artifacts showing the highly developed capacities of the mound builders---tools, beads, utensils, pottery, weapons, metal ornaments, stone carvings, and even evidences of cloth weaving.

This curious burial mound, and many others in the vicinity, are now included in Dickson Mounds State Park, a twenty-acre tract maintained by the State of Illinois in the Lewistown area. The park is open to the public and is visited by an increasing number of sightseers each year. A mound builder museum was established here by Mr. Don Dickson, who also donated a mound burial exhibit to the Chicago Natural History Museum.

Under Three Flags

First white men to view the future site of Fulton County were, of course, the French explorers, Father Marquette and Louis Jolliet. After having discovered the Upper Mississippi River in 1673, they were paddling up the Illinois River, on their way back to Montreal, when they passed the mouth of the Spoon River and saw for the first time land that was to become Fulton County. At that period, the vast wilderness region of mid-America was known as New France.

One hundred years later, after the close of the French and Indian Wars, this great domain came into the possession of the British, who by then had formed the thirteen colonies on the Atlantic seaboard. Then came the American Revolution of 1775-1783. After George Rogers Clark and his handful of American backwoodsmen captured key British posts in Illinois and Indiana, the new American flag was for the first time raised over what is now the eastern half of the Midwest.

There followed the formation of the Northwest Territory, out of which were later carved the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and part of Minnesota. When the Territory of Illinois was created in 1809, future Fulton County was part of St. Clair County, then in 1812 it became part of Madison County; in 1816, part of Crawford County; in 1819, part of Clark County (after Illinois was admitted to statehood in 1818), and finally, in 1821, it became part of Pike County. It was in 1823 that Fulton County came into existence.

The Military Tract

Before Fulton County was formed, and before Illinois was admitted to statehood, the United States government set aside a vast region of land in Illinois for veterans of the War of 1812. This was called the Military Tract. It lay between the Illinois and Mississippi rivers and extended upward as far as the north boundary lines of Bureau and Henry counties.

As may be readily seen, Fulton County was afterwards carved out of the Military Tract. Any veteran of the War of 1812 could have a free quarter-section of land here if he wanted it. But there were not many who accepted the offer; it seems the hardships of frontier life did not appeal to them. So a lot of veterans sold their "prairie quarter" for $100.00, or even less, while others traded theirs for a horse, a cow, or a watch.

What happened afterwards was that the first settlers of Fulton County had great difficulty in ascertaining the status of their land; they did not know if their tract was "Congress land," which they were entitled to pre-empt, or "Patent land," which belonged to some soldier who had probably sold it. Oftentimes, a "land shark" would turn up as the owner and demand an exorbitant price for a tract that the settler had cleared, cultivated and on which he had built a home.

The Hermit Doctor

A strange and elusive character, one who gave up medical practice in the East to become a hermit in the West, is on record as being the first white man to dwell in future Fulton County. This individual was Dr. W. T. Davison. Just when "Doc" Davison, as he was known, arrived on the south bank of the Spoon River near the later village of Waterford, has not been ascertained, but he was there when the county's first permanent settler, John Eveland, came in 1820.

Various traditions have come down to us in explanation of Dr. Davison's eccentric life as a hermit. One version has it that he was disappointed in a love affair in some Eastern city. Another story is that, while serving as an officer in the regular army, he fought a duel with a fellow officer, one from the South, and killed his opponent. He then fled into the wilderness of the West, as much stricken with remorse as with fear or being apprehended by the authorities.

Living by himself in his cabin, Doc Davison refused to mingle with the early settlers of Fulton County. It is said that he was a fine looking man, that he kept himself neat in appearance, and that his cabin was always clean and orderly. He was obviously an educated person, one early settler reported. After noting an increasing number of settlers coming into the Spoon River country, Doc Davison, we are told, quietly gathered his belongings into a canoe one day in 1824, paddled up the Illinois River, and spent the remainder of his life as a hermit near Starved Rock. Such is all that is known of the first white man to live in Fulton County.

First Permanent Settler

On a spring day in 1820, when what is now Fulton County was part of Pike County, there arrived at the mouth of Spoon River a Daniel Boone-type of frontiersman named John Eveland. With him, in a forty-foot cottonwood pirogue, were his wife and twelve children. After building a log cabin about half-a-mile north of where Waterford later stood, John Eveland entered the pages of local history as the first permanent settler of Fulton County.

John Eveland was not a veteran of the War of 1812. But he was a true frontiersman, always keeping one step ahead of civilization. He was born in Kentucky. Later he came to Calhoun County, Illinois. Then he moved to what afterwards became Fulton County. After settling near Spoon River, John Eveland grew restless again in a few years and moved to Buckheart Township, just south of where the City of Canton was afterwards built.

At the first meeting of the county commissioners' court after Fulton County was organized in 1823, John Eveland was appointed first treasurer of the new county. But he declined the honor, and when he "neglected to appear and take his engagements in Court as the law directs," he was relieved of his appointment and Thomas L. Ross was named treasurer. One of John Eveland's sons, Amos, lived to a ripe old age on the Eveland farm in Buckheart Township.

Major Ossian M. Ross: The "Father of Fulton County"

One year after John Eveland arrived, there came to the area a man who was the first War of 1812 veteran to claim his "prairie quarter" in the Military Tract. That newcomer was Major Ossian M. Ross. After settling in the region in 1821, Major Ross founded not only Fulton County and its county seat, Lewistown, but established a family that became foremost in the annals of the Illinois River Valley.

Major Ross, it seems, was a natural-born colonizer. After some eight years in Fulton County, he moved across the Illinois River into Mason County and there established Havana, now a lively city of some 4,000 population. He initiated a ferry service at Havana, opened the first store, built numerous houses for new arrivals and established "Ross's Hotel" for wayfarers.

Major Ross was born in New York state on August 16, 1790, and there, early in his career became a farmer. After his marriage to Miss Mary Winans in 1811, and some eight years after the War of 1812, he traveled west to Illinois with his wife and three children. He evidently intended to establish a town in the Military Tract, for he brought with him a blacksmith, a carpenter and several other workmen.

At first the Ross party was housed in John Eveland's cabin and several sheds. Then Major Ross began construction of a sizable cabin on his "prairie quarter," on part of which the village of Lewistown was afterwards built. This cabin occupied the site on which Major Newton Walker, another early settler and friend of Lincoln's, later built his home. Ossian Ross lived in the cabin until 1829, at which time he went across the Illinois River and established the village of Havana.

Lewistown is Founded

It was in the spring of 1822 that Ossian Ross laid out the village of Lewistown, naming it after his son, Lewis W. Ross, who then was a small boy. The surveyor of the new village was Stephen Dewey, who built several of the earliest buildings there. About this time a younger brother of the founder of the village, Thomas Lee Ross, arrived and soon became active in village affairs. He was named first treasurer of Fulton County after John Eveland declined to accept the position.

In establishing his village, Ossian Ross provided for a "public square," as a clerk wrote it at the time, as well as a meeting house, a schoolhouse, a Masonic temple and a "burying yard." It was not until after Fulton County was organized that a courthouse and jail were built at Lewistown.

When Stephen Phelps arrived at Lewistown in 1824 with his wife and five sons, he set up an Indian trading post and soon enlarged it into a general store. It stood at Main and Washington Streets. Here he was assisted by one of his sons, William, who later, as Captain William Phelps, became a well known fur trader and friend of the Indians.

A landmark of Lewistown in the years just before and after the Civil War was the magnificent Lewis L. Ross mansion, built by Ossian's son.

Often viewed by the poet, Edgar Lee Masters, when he was a boy in Lewistown, this spacious Hudson River-style residence became the inspiration of the "McNeely Mansion" in Masters famous book Spoon River Anthology. Another local landmark was the Maj. Newton Walker house, in which Abraham Lincoln was a frequent guest.

The Fenner Brothers

Not too much is known about the Fenner brothers, Roswell and Reuben, who were living at the John Eveland cabin when Ossian Ross and his party arrived in 1821. It has been ascertained, however, that the Fenner brothers were bachelors at the time, but that not long afterwards one of them entered the married state. Some months later, he was arrested for whipping his wife. When brought before Stephen Phelps, pioneer storekeeper who was now a judge, the Fenner brother involved was defended by the court. Judge Phelps is reported to have said that "according to law and the scriptures a man has a right to chastise his wife.

Birth of Fulton County

The law, during pioneer times in Illinois, required that 350 legal voters had to be living in a region before it could be organized into a county. Without knowing whether that many residents lived in their area, Ossian M. Ross and a few other early settlers of the Spoon River country started a movement, early in 1823, for the organization of Fulton County. It was to embrace all of the region, they said, from Rushville on the south to Chicago on the north.

Their efforts met with success. On January 28, 1823, the Illinois legislature granted them permission to organize a new county out of a part of what was then Pike County. An election was set for the following April 14th to select the new county's officials. In the meantime, a commission was appointed to pick a county seat. This group was composed of Hugh R. Colter, John Totten and Stephen Chase.

There was no difficulty about selecting a county seat. The commissioners chose Lewistown. Here, then, was held Fulton County's first election on April 14, 1823. At that time there were but five settlements in the new county---Rushville, Lewistown, Canton, Fort Clark (later Peoria) and Chicago. The latter place was a mere collection of fur trader's cabins clustered around Fort Dearborn. Ostensibly, these settlements, and the wilderness region roundabout, contained not less than 350 legal voters.

On Fulton County's first election day, however, a total of thirty-five votes were cast. As the only balloting place was at Lewistown, it appears this location was too distant for many of the voters to reach on election day. But a sizable group of them came down from Peoria in canoes on the Illinois River, paddling a distance of fifty miles, then journeying up the Spoon River for ten miles, then tramping through the woods for six miles to Lewistown, "bringing their whiskey with them," as one early chronicler tells us.

What brought this determined group of eighteen voters to Lewistown was a hot contest over the office of sheriff. In "south" Fulton County the candidate for this post was none other than Major Ossian M. Ross, while in "north" Fulton County the candidate was William Eads, a resident of Peoria. It looked like a close contest just before election day. On his way down to Lewistown with the canoe party, however, Mr. Eads picked up two stray bachelors, "colonized" them, and thus on election day won the office of sheriff by a majority of two votes over his opponent.

In addition to Eads, others elected that day were David W. Barnes, Joseph Moffatt and Thomas R. Covell, all county commissioners; Hugh R. Colter, county clerk; Thomas Lee Ross, county treasurer; William Clark, coroner; and John N. Ross, county surveyor.

The balloting took place in the log cabin home of Major Ross. Although he was disappointed in not winning the office of sheriff, the "Father of Fulton County" soon was serving in other public posts---as first postmaster of the county and as an early justice of the peace. When another county election was held in the following year, Major Ross again ran for sheriff, and this time was elected to the post.

Named after Robert Fulton

Instead of having his new county named after a war hero, as was customary then, Major Ross succeeded in having it named after a peace hero---the great American inventor and perfecter of the steamship, Robert Fulton. It was only eight years before Fulton County was organized that Robert Fulton had died at the age of fifty and was buried in the cemetery of Trinity Church in New York City. But out in the western wilderness, out in the new Illinois country, Major Ross had not forgotten Robert Fulton's history-making achievement in his native state of New York---that of the construction and operation of the Clermont, first commercially successful steamboat in America. Whether or not Major Ross saw the Clermont in the Hudson River on that eventful day in 1807, is not known. He was then a lad of seventeen. In any case, when Fulton county was organized, he suggested that it be named after Robert Fulton.

Chicago's First Merchant: John Kinzie

Among business matters taken up at the first meeting of the Fulton County commissioners was that of the appointment of a number of justices of the peace. One man they recommended to the Governor of Illinois as "a fit and suitable person for Justice of the Peace" was John Kinzie, often called the "Father of Chicago." He was one of the earliest settlers of Chicago, and was that city's first merchant.

It is not known, however, as to whether he received his commission as a justice of the peace of Fulton County. More definite word about him comes to us after 1825, when Fulton County was cut in half and Peoria County was formed. At that time John Kinzie was recommended for justice of the peace of Peoria County, and in this case he actually received his commission.

While Chicago was still in Fulton County, it consisted of Fort Dearborn and the log cabins of some fourteen settlers, fur traders and civilian aides at the fort. The best known of the fur traders here was, of course, John Kinzie. Another outstanding individual of the little frontier settlement on the shore of Lake Michigan was Dr. Alexander Wolcott, who then held the title of government Indian agent.

First Marriage in Chicago

It was a Fulton County justice of the peace, John Hamlin, who performed the first marriage ceremony in Chicago. When that city was still in Fulton County, Judge Hamlin went to the cabin home of John Kinzie where, on July 2, 1823, he joined in wedlock John Kinzie's daughter, Ellen Marion, and Dr. Alexander Wolcott, the Indian agent at Chicago. In that same year, the soldiers vacated Fort Dearborn, and Dr. Wolcott was placed in charge of the military post. He and his wife lived in the officer's quarters at the fort, and there they remained until soldiers once more came back to Fort Dearborn in 1828.

City of Canton Founded

"He gave to Canton its establishment and almost all of its early prosperity, his enterprise and energy directing attention to it and bringing in new settlers, many of whom were attracted by a desire to settle near him. He was killed by the storm in 1835."

Such is an early account of Isaac Swan, founder of Canton, now the largest city in Fulton County. A native of Vermont, where he received but a rudimentary education, Isaac Swan was a man of great energy and vision, and, like Major Ossian Ross, was a natural-born colonizer. He laid out the town of Canton on the 10th day of December, 1825---two years after Fulton County was organized.

When Isaac Swan first appeared on the scene of future Canton, he found a settler there named Theodore Sargeant, a veteran of the War of 1812. It appears, however, that Sargeant had made his home on the wrong piece of land. For Isaac Swan, who was by no means a "land shark," produced papers showing he had earlier purchased this tract from a veteran, and when Sargeant saw that the sale was authentic he vacated the land on which he had settled.

While still occupying this land, Sargeant had a cabin on it, but he only lived here at intervals. He was then a bachelor and spent considerable time at the home of a brother, Charles, in another part of the county. As a result of this situation, Theodore Sargeant allowed a blacksmith, one Harrison Hughland, to occupy his cabin. In addition to blacksmithing, Hughland made cow bells for settlers of the countryside, thus becoming the first manufacturer of Canton---a city that now is one of the largest manufacturing centers of the Illinois River Valley.

Isaac Swan, after the departure of Theodore Sargeant and his blacksmith tenant, immediately laid out a townsite and invited newcomers to settle there. In fact, Isaac Swan did more than this---after his lots were surveyed he offered one free to any person who would build a cabin on it. As for the name "Canton," Isaac Swan selected it in the belief that his new town was antipodal to Canton, China.

First to take advantage of Swan's generous offer was John Hannan, who arrived with his family in the same year Canton was founded. Hannan was given a lot on Main Street, and there he built the first permanent residence in Canton. And here he continued to live until his death in 1831, after which the house was occupied by his widow. In her later years, Mrs. Hannan moved to a farm outside of Canton.

Another who early received a free Swan lot was John C. Owens, and it was in the Owens cabin on Wood Street there was born the first white child within the boundaries of the original town of Canton. This was John C. Owens' oldest boy---but, strangely enough, his given name is unknown to local historians.

"Swan's Catch-All"

If John Hannan's cabin was the first private home in Canton, the first public building was an edifice familiarly known to early settlers as "Swan's Catch-all." It was an establishment that gave further evidence of Isaac Swan's energy, imagination and enterprise. Almost at the same time that John Hannan was building his cabin, Isaac Swan was busy with the construction of a large log structure, which, when completed, was opened to newcomers as a temporary stopping-place, a shelter they could occupy until the completion of a cabin of their own. In time it was dubbed "Swan's Catch-all." It stood on Union Street, above Fourth Street, in Canton.

Battle of Maloney's Ferry

There were still quite a few Indians in Fulton County when the first settlers arrived. On the whole, they were quiet and peaceful. Sometimes, however, they became troublesome, as witness the Battle of Malony's Ferry. It occurred one day in 1828 at the mouth of Spoon River where a genial Irishman named Malony ran a ferry. On that day five white men arrived with a barrel of whiskey for their good friend Malony. Finding Mr. Malony temporarily absent from his post, they left their gift on the ferryboat and departed for Lewistown. A short time later they were overtaken by a messenger who said that a party of about twenty-five Indians had found the whiskey barrel and were helping themselves to its contents. On returning to the ferryboat, the gift-givers found a fierce free-for-all battle in progress between the drunken Indians and Malony and some of his friends, with the combatants using fists, canes, stones and knives. Although there were a few injuries on both sides, the Battle of Malony's Ferry would have been much more serious if the squaws of the Indians had not quickly secreted their husband's guns when the trouble first started.

A. Lincoln, Postmaster

One of the first mail carriers of Fulton County was young Harvey L. Ross, son of Major Ossian M. Ross. He was only fifteen years old when his father, who then was serving as postmaster at Lewistown, assigned him on the mail route from Springfield to Monmouth, a distance of 135 miles. Once a week young Harvey Ross rode this wilderness route on a horse, carrying the mail in a leather bag. And among the places he called at weekly was the log village of New Salem, in Menard County, where the postmaster was a lanky, friendly fellow named Abe Lincoln, an individual who had received his appointment as postmaster through the recommendation of Major Ossian M. Ross of Lewistown.

Black Hawk War of 1832

It was a Fulton County man, Major Isaiah Stillman, who was in command at the opening battle of the Black Hawk War of 1832, and it was four Fulton County soldiers who fell in that battle. The encounter, caused by a misunderstanding on the part of both soldiers and Indians, is known as the Battle of Stillman's Run and took place on the Rock River, near present Dixon, Illinois. Among the many soldiers who lost their lives in this battle were John Walters, Tyus Childs, Bird Ellis and Joseph Farris---all of Fulton County. In after years, Major Stillman was promoted to a general in the United States Army. He died just before the outbreak of the Civil War while living at Kingston, in Peoria County.

Major Newton Walker

Another "major" of early Fulton County days, one who also played an important role in the history of the county, was Major Newton Walker. Described in Spoon River Anthology as an individual who had known some of the leaders of the American Revolution during his younger days, Major Newton Walker came to Lewistown in 1835 and, as a builder, a few years later erected Fulton County's third courthouse---an ornate structure in which Abraham Lincoln afterwards practiced as a lawyer and in which Stephen A. Douglas once sat as a judge.

Subsequently, Major Newton Walker built a brick home for himself and family in Lewistown, and here he often entertained his intimate friend, Lincoln. It is said that the major frequently played a fiddle for Lincoln, and in exchange Lincoln would tell stories and anecdotes to the major. In this house Lincoln ate his last dinner, and made his last appearance, in Lewistown on August 17, 1858. On that day he delivered a speech from the portico of the old courthouse built by Major Walker. Afterwards, Lincoln was a dinner guest in the Walker house. On the following day Major Walker drove Lincoln to a railroad station some thirty miles from Lewistown. Major Walker lived in the brick house until his death in 1897 at the age of ninety-four years.

Tornado of 1835

An early historian of Fulton County writes: "There was one night in the history of Canton that will never be forgotten so long as one of its survivors is alive." This was the night of June 18, 1835, when a tornado struck the village of Canton and surrounding area and took the lives of five persons. "The great wonder," continues our historian, "is that no more lives were lost. Out of a population of approximately five hundred, only four persons were killed in town, and one in the nearby countryside. The destruction of property and life that would ensue were such a storm to sweep over the country now would be absolutely appalling. Then the country was sparsely settled, and of course the destruction was not so great as it would be now." Among the victims of this 1835 tornado were Isaac Swan, founder of the city of Canton, and his infant son.

A River Port

Just east of Lewistown, on the Illinois River, is located one of the oldest villages in Fulton County. When first established in 1836, it was given the name Liverpool because its founders planned on setting up a great river port here; one that might be as vital to central Illinois as the original Liverpool is to northern England. Although for some years steamers unloaded goods here for Canton and Lewistown, Liverpool failed to grow as a port; no railroads came to it and its location was found to be inconvenient. Today, Liverpool is a commercial fishing port, and around it may be found some of the finest hunting grounds in Illinois, a feature that has brought many private hunting lodges to the area.

John Jacob Astor: Fulton County Landowner

John Jacob Astor, who founded one of the largest fortunes in America as a pioneer fur trader and New York land speculator, was owner of the acreage on which now stands Astoria, a town of 1,308 population. Astoria had its origin in two villages established more than a hundred years ago. The first was Washington, laid out in 1836; then came Vienna, founded a year later about a half mile westward. When it was learned subsequently that another town in Illinois was named Vienna, and as the two villages were now practically grown together, the new name of "Astoria" was adopted.

Mexican War of 1846

At the outbreak of the Mexican War in 1846 a company of soldiers was raised in Fulton County and commanded by Captain Lewis W. Ross, son of the founder of the county. This unit, Company K, was assigned to the Fourth Regiment under Colonel Edward D. Baker, and saw service in the Battle of Vera Cruz and the storming of Cerro Gordo. A number of other companies were organized in Fulton County, but these were not mustered into the Army because the state's quota was already filled.

Cholera Epidemic

One day in 1849 a resident of the river port town of Liverpool went aboard a steamboat that had just arrived from St. Louis and which contained a passenger dying from cholera. On returning to his home, the Liverpool citizen became ill with the same disease and died shortly afterwards. In time a cholera epidemic broke out in Liverpool Township, bringing death to thirteen persons. The epidemic did not spread to Lewistown, but six miles west.

Pioneer "Carrie Nations"

Although a prohibition law had been passed by the town council of Canton in early days, it was almost constantly violated by a bold saloon-keeper named Mallory. Finally, the ladies of Canton decided to do something about it. One day in 1856 about two hundred of them attended an auction at a ladies' dress shop, and, though the day was warm, they were all wearing shawls. At a signal from their leader, the ladies marched out of the dress shop, headed across the public square, and came up to Mr. Mallory's saloon. Then, from under their shawls, they pulled out hatchets and immediately proceeded to wreck the Mallory establishment, smashing bottles, barrels and furniture. The sociable Mr. Mallory was not present at the time, but after that event he seems to have disappeared from the annals of Canton history.

Civil War

Immediately after President Lincoln, who once had practiced law in Lewistown and who had many friends there, issued a call for volunteers at the outbreak of the Civil War, Fulton County men responded instantly and soon were in Union Army companies and regiments that marched off to battlefields in the South. In command of the 17th Regiment, composed of Fulton County men, was Colonel Leonard F. Ross, another son of Ossian M. Ross. He was later promoted to brigadier-general. Additional Fulton County companies were organized as the war continued. And these, as well as the Colonel Ross regiment, took part in some of the most important battles of the Civil War.

County Seat Contest

So large had Canton grown in the years after the Civil War that a movement was started there in 1878 to have the county seat removed from Lewistown to the bustling city in Canton Township. This was vigorously objected to by the citizens of Lewistown. Finally, the question was submitted to the voters of Fulton County, and, after a lively and oftentimes bitter contest, it was settled when most of the voters favored retaining the county seat at Lewistown. Thereafter, the county settled down to the orderly routine of its everyday life.

Boyhood of a Poet

In the year 1880 there came to settle in Lewistown a lawyer and former prosecuting attorney of Menard County by the name of Hardin Wallace Masters. With him, in addition to his wife and other children, was an eleven-year-old son who was to spend the remainder of his boyhood in Lewistown. That boy was Edgar Lee Masters, who became one of the foremost of American poets and whose masterpiece is Spoon River Anthology. It was in Lewistown that the late Edgar Lee Masters grew to maturity and studied law in his father's office. He afterwards went up to Chicago, engaged in the practice of law, and wrote the many books, both in prose and poetry, that brought him fame as a poet and author. In his autobiography Across Spoon River, he described his boyhood days in Lewistown and along the winding and picturesque Spoon River.

"Spoon River Anthology"

Almost immediately after Edgar Lee Masters issued his Spoon River Anthology in 1915, it was acclaimed by most literary critics as a new American classic. And now, after almost forty years, it is still so acclaimed. The book is a collection of epitaphs, in free verse, supposedly having to do with the secret lives of deceased people who had lived in towns and villages along the Spoon River in Fulton County. But the principal appeal of Spoon River Anthology is its universal quality; the people described in it could be found in any county of the United States, or in any county of England or elsewhere in the world. In this regard, Spoon River Anthology could be compared with that great English classic, The Deserted Village, by Oliver Goldsmith. An interesting sidelight on the writing of Spoon River Anthology is that most of the poetic epitaphs in it were penned in the Chicago home of Edgar Lee Masters. In addition to this volume and his autobiography, Masters wrote Starved

Rock (1919), Doomsday Book (1920), The Open Sea (1921), New Spoon River (1924), and The Serpent in the Wilderness (1933). He also wrote two boys' books, Mitch Miller and Skeeters Kirby. In 1922 Masters wrote a novel, Children of the Market Place, in which the central figure is Stephen A. Douglas, who once was a judge in Lewistown. Another one-time Lewistown figure, Abraham Lincoln, is described by Masters in his Lincoln the Man, published in 1931. Edgar Lee Masters died in Philadelphia in 1950 at the age of 81.

International Harvester Works

It was in 1919, one year after the end of the first World War, that Fulton County became the site of one of the largest plow-manufacturing plants in the world. This happened when the International Harvester Company of Chicago absorbed, and greatly expanded, the historic old P. & O. Plow Works on the outskirts of the city of Canton. The latter firm was established in 1847 by William Parlin and Thompson Maple, who at first made steel mold board plows by hand in a blacksmith shop. In 1852 the firm changed hands and Thompson Maple was replaced by William J. Orendorff. In the years following, the Parlin and Orendorff company supplied a large portion of the steel plows used in cultivating the cornfields and wheatlands of the expanding Midwest. Today, this large plant, which occupies an area of twenty acres and which now is owned by the International Harvester Company, employs several thousand persons and turns out more than 1,000 types of plows, harrows, discs and other agricultural implements.

Second World War

During the second World War, from 1939 to 1945, one of the largest Army training camps in America was located in Fulton County. This was Camp Ellis, which occupied some 17,000 acres in the region surrounding the one-time village of Bernadotte--a region made famous by Edgar Lee Masters in his Spoon River Anthology. As many as 40,000 soldiers were trained at a time in Camp Ellis. At a later period, several thousand prisoners of war were confined at Camp Ellis. More recently, the federal government planned on building here an assembly plant for atomic weapons, but this project was afterwards abandoned.

"Who's Who" in Fulton County

Among numerous outstanding citizens in the county today the most prominent are Congressman Robert Bruce Chipperfield and his younger brother, Claude Burnett Chipperfield. Both are maternal descendents of Major Ossian M. Ross, the founder of Fulton County. A native of Canton, where he was born on November 20, 1899, Robert B. Chipperfield is a lawyer by profession. He was first elected to Congress in 1939 and has been serving in that body since then. His home is in Canton. Congressman Chipperfield's brother, Claude B., soon after graduating from the University of Illinois in 1927, entered the U.S. State Department and remained there until the outbreak of World War II, when he joined the Army Military Intelligence Service. During the war he was engaged on many important assignments in Europe. At the end of the war he once more entered the State Department.

Fulton County Today

Today, Fulton County, with a land area of 874 square miles, has a total population of 43,716. Of this total, 17,208 live in Canton and other cities, towns and villages of the county, whereas 26,508 live in the country, either as farmers or rural dwellers. The rural non-farm population is 15,695, while the farm population is 10,813. The county is divided into twenty-six townships, in most of which are located one or more towns or villages. The estimated amount of retail sales for the entire county in 1953 was $43,500,000. The estimated total of individual income for the same year was $72,500,000.

Of the total of 43,716 who live in the county today, 11,927 reside within the corporate limits of the city of Canton. The city is thirty miles southwest of Peoria and is at the junction of state highways 100, 78 and 9. It is served by the Chicago, Baltimore & Quincy, the Peoria & Western and the Toledo railroads. Within Canton's trading zone, a much larger area than the city, there are ten coal mines. Here, also, are the city's principal industries, which, in addition to the huge International Harvester Company plow works, include two large overall and work jacket manufacturing plants, two beverage bottling establishments, three creameries and dairies, a wholesale dry cleaning plant, a chicken hatchery, two cabinet factories and a cigar box manufacturing plant.

There are 193 retail stores in Canton employing more than a thousand persons. In 1953 these stores sold an estimated $23,750,000 worth of goods and merchandise. Included in the retail outlets of Canton are branches of such national chains as F. W. Woolworth, J. J. Newberry and S. S. Kresage, and also branches of such national grocery chains as A & P and Kroger.

CANTON

A trading and manufacturing center of the first rank in that portion of the Illinois River Valley lying just southwest of the Peoria metropolitan zone, Canton is the largest city in Fulton County, having a population of 11,927. As Canton is also one of the oldest communities in the county, much of its history is embodied in the opening narrative of this book. Here, too, may be found information on its present status as a trading and manufacturing center.

The city of Canton is situated at the south end of Canton Township. In 1947 and 1948 parts of Canton Township were annexed to Canton city--an indication of the recent expansion of the City. The population of the township is 15,066. Many new suburban homes have been built in the township outside the city of Canton.

The city is thirty miles southwest of Peoria and is located at the junction of state highways 100, 78 and 9. It is served by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Toledo and the Peoria & Western railroads. On its outskirts lies a huge branch plant of the International Harvester Company, occupying an area of more than twenty acres. There are ten coal mines within the trading area of Canton.

ASTORIA

The town of Astoria, at the eastern edge of Astoria Township, was named after John Jacob Astor, pioneer American fur trader and New York land speculator who founded one of the largest fortunes in the United States. He was the original owner of the tract on which Astoria was laid out in 1836.

At first, though, the town was called Washington. It was in 1836 that the village of Washington was platted, and, a year later, another village called Vienna was laid out nearby. Afterwards, the villages grew together, and, when it was discovered there was another town in Illinois named Vienna, the combined villages were given the new appellation of Astoria.

At one time Astoria was an important station on the stagecoach line between Peoria and Quincy. The town today has a population of 1,308. There are many retired farmers living in Astoria. Its principal activity is the buying and selling of farm products. It is located on US 24.

BANNER

Situated but a short distance from the Illinois River, in Banner Township, Banner is at the center of a well known hunting and fishing region. It has a population of 215. The population of Banner Township is 756. The township was established in 1850 and its first officials were: David Markley, supervisor; William H. Smith, town clerk; George W. Chinn, assessor; and John McKinley, collector.

The first settler of what afterwards became Banner Township was Joseph Anderson, who arrived in the 1820's. In later years a tavern called the Half Way House was operated in Banner Township by Alexander Wilson. It was given this name because it stood half way between the city of Canton and a landing stage on the Illinois River.

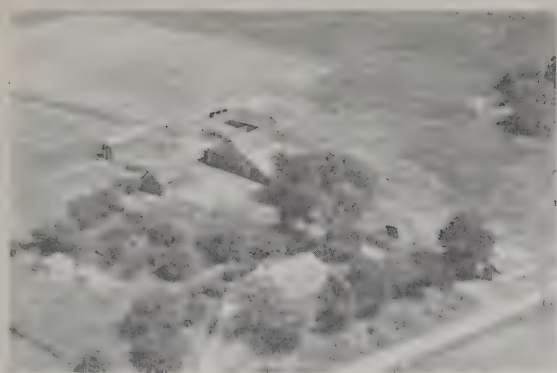

Since earliest times, Banner Township has been a gathering-place for hunters and fishermen. There are numerous private hunting lodges in the township today. The town of Banner is on US 24 and State 9.

BERNADOTTE TOWNSHIP

Soon after the outbreak of World War II the old Spoon River village of Bernadotte, in Bernadotte Township, disappeared and in and around it, for miles in all directions, was built Camp Ellis, a training camp for as many as 40,000 soldiers at a time. At a later period in the conflict, many prisoners of war were confined in a portion of Camp Ellis. In order to make way for the camp, some 700 farmers of Bernadotte Township had to vacate their land.

At the present time, the township has a population of 369. It was first settled in 1826 by William Walters. According to local legend, William Walters bought the site, on which the town of Bernadotte was afterwards built, from the Indians for 50 deerskins. Later, so the story goes, William Walters and a party of whites drove the local Indians across the Mississippi River.

It was in 1835 that Joseph Coleman built a flour mill on the Spoon River here and laid out the town of Bernadotte. At first the town flourished, but when the railroads came and none was built through Bernadotte, the town subsequently declined. When he was a boy, Edgar Lee Masters spent many summer afternoons on the banks of the Spoon River near the old village of Bernadotte, and thus the village appears in in his literary classic, Spoon River Anthology.

BRYANT

Located about half way between Canton and Lewistown, on State 100, is the pioneer village of Bryant. It is one of the three communities in Buckheart township, the other two being St. David and Dunfermline. The population of Bryant today is 396. The population of Buckheart Township is 2,257.

Among the first settlers of what is now Buckheart Township was John Eveland, who, it is to be recalled, was the first permanent settler of Fulton County. Here, on the banks of Big Creek, John Eveland built a water mill and sawed some of the earliest timber in the township. Recorded as the first settlers of Buckheart Township were Seth Hilton and Hazael Putnam.

It was not until 1846 that a Methodist Episcopal church was organized in Bryant. An earlier church was one established by the Regular Baptists. Then, in 1854, the Bryant Christian Church was founded.

ST. DAVID

Largest of the villages in Buckheart Township is St. David, with a population of 812. It is located on State 100 and lies just south of the city of Canton. Near it, to the east, is situated the new village Dunfermline, incorporated in 1947.

St. David is one of the oldest villages in Fulton County. An early house of worship here is the St. David Methodist Episcopal church. When this congregation was first organized more than seventy-five years ago, its members met in the local St. David schoolhouse. Then, in 1876, the congregation built a church and this became known for a time as Shryock's Chapel, so-called because Mr. Shryock had contributed generously to the building of it.

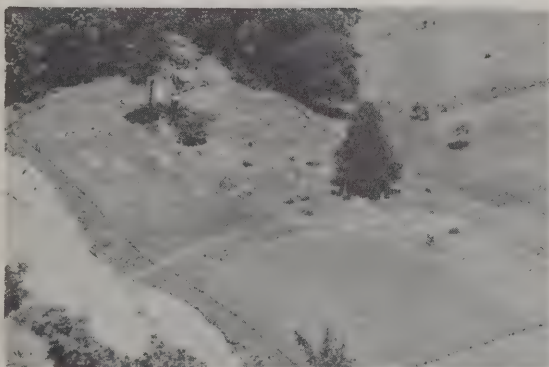

DUNFERMLINE

Dunfermline is one of Fulton County's newest villages, having been incorporated in 1947. It now has a population of 292. The village is located just south of the city of Canton, on State 78. Near it is situated the old village of St. David. As Dunfermline is also not far from the Illinois River, it is something of a hunter's rendezvous each autumn when the duck season opens. Many fine new homes have been built in the village and surrounding territory during the recent years, some of them by former residents of Canton. Dunfermline is in Buckheart Township.

SMITHFIELD

Smithfield, now with a population of 355, was founded in 1868 by James Smith, early Fulton County settler. It is the only village in Cass Township and is located on State 95, not far from Spoon River. Soon after the village was founded, Hiram Higgins and William Cameron opened "additions" to it.

When Cass Township was organized in 1850, it was named after General Lewis Cass, first territorial governor of Michigan, secretary of war under President Jackson and secretary of state under President Buchanan. The suggestion for this name came from Henry Waughtel, who settled in the township in 1828 and who was elected the township's first supervisor.

William Totten was the first to live in future Cass Township, arriving in 1823, or the same year in which Fulton County was organized. When a few others joined Totten, his place became known as "Totten's Prairie." It is said that William Totten was a friend of Chief Black Hawk, and that in early days the Indian leader often visited at Totten's Prairie.

DEERFIELD TOWNSHIP

So-named because of the many deer found there in early days, Deerfield Township is bordered on the west by the Spoon River. It is a fully developed farming area and has a population of 528. The first settler here was Robert Reeves, who came in 1823. Later, several others acquired land near him and in time the place became known as "Reeves Frairie."

After the passing of Robert Reeves, his heirs sold the original Reeves farm to William Weaver, who, in addition to farming, served the township in various capacities -- assessor, supervisor and school director. In later years, when William Weaver retired from active life, his farm was taken over by a son, Joshua Weaver. The latter became well known as a stock breeder. In 1874 Joshua Weaver became president of the Deerfield Sabbath School Association.

ELLISVILLE

When Levi D. Ellis, who was born and reared in the South, settled in 1828 in the region that afterwards became Ellisville Township, he immediately went to work building a log cabin and a flour mill. That was the beginning of the village of Ellisville and the township of the same name. Today, the township has a population of 319 and the village a population of 157.

Before coming to Fulton County, Levi D. Ellis had tarried for a time in the wilderness region where later the capital city of Springfield was laid out. He is said to have cut the first tree for the first log cabin built on the site of future Springfield. After his arrival on the banks of the Spoon River, in Fulton County, Levi Ellis built a house and flour mill and laid out the village of Ellisville.

Here, he and his wife reared a family of eight sons and one daughter. When Ellisville Township was organized in 1850, it was named after the village established by Levi Ellis. The founder of the village died in 1855.

FAIRVIEW

Northwest of Canton, on State 97, lies the village of Fairview, only community in Fairview Township. The village has a population of 568, while the township has 1,029. First to settle in the future township was Matthias Swegle, who built a cabin at the head of Swegle Creek in 1829. Realizing that he was lacking in education, Matthias Swegle, a big man who weighed 340 pounds, attended the district school with his children. His eldest child was then twenty-two years old.

The village of Fairview was laid out in 1837 by Moses Hall, Benjamin Foster, Peter Pumyea and Richard Davis. These men induced people in the East to "pull up stakes" and move to the new and promising West; to come and settle in their new town in Illinois. In time, Fairview was a flourishing village. The first public officials of Fairview Township after it was organized in 1850 were: T. M. Morse, supervisor; J. V. Van Dorn, town clerk; Peter Pumyea, assessor; and Edward Cox, collector.

TABLE GROVE

Although a portion of the village of Table Grove lies in adjoining Vermont Township, its main body is in Farmers' Township, a fertile farming area west of Lewistown. Located on US 136, Table Grove has a total population of 481. At first Table Grove was called "Laurel Hill" because of its situation on a rise of ground, but later the present name was adopted.

It was in 1838 that the village of Laurel Hill was laid out by James Spicer, Benjamin Windham and Caleb Dilworth. First to build a house there was James Spicer, and the first storekeeper was William Lovell. In the 1870's the village contained seven business houses, as well as a good hotel, two meat markets, two shoe stores, a saddle and harness shop, two millinery stores, a wagon and paint shop, a smithy, a lumber yard and a flour mill.

The first settler of Farmers' Township was John Barker, who arrived in 1829. It is said that the township derived its name from the many farmers who lived there when the township was organized in 1850. First supervisor of the township was J. H. Kinne.

FARMINGTON

Second largest city in Fulton County is Farmington, with a population of 2,651. It is at the center of a widespread mining area almost due west of the city of Peoria, in Peoria County. State highways 116 and 78 intersect in Farmington, and through it runs the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

When Joseph Cone with his family, arrived in 1833 in what later became Farmington Township, he selected for his homesite a gentle rise of ground at the north end of the future township. After living in a cabin here during the winter of 1833, Joseph Cone decided that this would be a good location to lay out a village. And so, in the fall of 1834, he and two other early settlers, George W. Little and Hiram Palmer, established the village of Farmington.

But Joseph Cone was not the first settler of Farmington Township. That honor goes to Jonas Marchant, who, with his wife and four children, arrived in 1827. Then came the Sargeant brothers, Charles and Theodore, both of whom were veterans of the War of 1812. The population of Farmington today is 3,960.

N O R R I S

At the north end of Canton Township, on State 78, lies the little village of Norris, with a population of 138. It was founded more than a hundred years ago. An old historical work has this to say of the community: "The little village of Norris is upon the northeast quarter of Section 3 in Canton Township. It is on the Canton and Farmington township line, and is surrounded by as fine a farming area as Fulton County can boast of; but being so near to Canton its trade can never assume any great proportions."

Almost in the center of Harris Township lies the village of Marietta, one of the oldest communities in Fulton County. It has a population of 178 and is located on State 95. The population of Harris Township is 680. Just east of Marietta winds the picturesque Spoon River.

In the year 1827 there arrived in the region one John Harris, who, after building a log cabin, engaged in the occupation of hunting and trapping. He thus became the first settler and it was after him that Harris Township was named when it was organized in 1850.

The village of Marietta was founded in 1837 by Lorenzo Bevans, Benjamin Hoyt and several others. Four years later the first church edifice was built in Marietta - the Marietta Methodist Episcopal church. The first supervisor of Harris Township was George Bamford and the first collector was John Harris.

ISABEL TOWNSHIP

That strange, almost half-legendary character, Dr. Davison, who was the first white man to live in Fulton County (although not its first permanent settler), is also of record as the first dweller in what later became Isabel Township. When John Eveland, the county's first permanent settler, arrived in 1820, he found Dr. Davison living in a cabin on the Spoon River. As more settlers arrived, Dr. Davison withdrew from contact with them, preferring to live the life of a hermit. A few years later he disappeared from the Spoon River country.

At a later period George Duncan came to future Isabel Township, and, on the Spoon River, built a grist mill that for a time was one of the largest in Fulton County. Soon a settlement grew up about the establishment and it became known as Duncan's Mills. Other early settlements in the township were Point Isabel, a small port on the Illinois River, and Otto, a hamlet on Otter Creek. Today, Isabel Township has a population of 387.

JOSHUA TOWNSHIP

Joshua Township is an entirely agricultural area lying just west of the city of Canton. Through it passes State 9. Its population today is 813. First settler of the township was Joshua Moore, who came in 1824, one year after Fulton County was organized. He was later joined by his son-in-law, John Walters, who was afterwards killed in action in the Black Hawk War of 1832.

A devoted Methodist, Joshua Moore held the first religious meetings in the township in his pioneer cabin home. Among visiting preachers who addressed these meetings was Peter Cartwright, most renowned of early Illinois circuit-riding ministers. First elected officials of Joshua Township were C. Jones, supervisor; John S. Wyckoff, town clerk; Benjamin Butler, assessor; and J. P. Standard, collector.

METHODIST CHURCH-Built in 1850 by the Presbyterians and later sold to the Methodists.

KERTON TOWNSHIP

Two early settlements of Kerton Township were West Point, a landing stage on the Illinois River, and Marbletown, a mill village near Otter Creek. The last was named after the firm of Hiram Marble & Son, which in 1868 purchased a saw mill here that had been built in 1857 by C. P. Richardson and William H. Cogshall.

First to settle in future Kerton Township were Reuben and Roswell Fenner, who came in 1823, the same year Fulton County was established. About 1835 there arrived John Kerton, after whom the township was later named but about whom little is known. Another early settler was Jacob Fisher, and it was on his farm near the Illinois River that a number of earthworks of the prehistoric "mound builders" were subsequently found. But these were not the same as the celebrated Dickson Mounds.

Kerton Township was organized in 1850. Its first supervisor was George Anderson. The population of the township today is 283.

LEE TOWNSHIP

Lee is another of the townships bordering on the winding Spoon River. There is no village in the township; it is entirely occupied by farms and patsure lands. Its population today is 496. The first settler of the township was Stephen Rigdon, who came in 1834. With him, in addition to his wife and other children, was an eleven-year-old son, Harrison. In later years, Harrison Rigdon was elected first clerk of Lee Township. He subsequently held other offices -- collector, constable, surveyor and school director. The first Baptist church of Lee Township was organized by the Rev. Miner in 1849. In 1866 there was established the Virgil Methodist Episcopal church. Before any church edifices appeared in the township, however, religious meetings were held at the home of Stephen Rigdon and were addressed by his brother, Elder John Rigdon, of the Christian church.

DICKSON MOUNDS
Lewistown, Illinois

The Dickson Mound, a prehistoric burial mound, is on the Illinois River bluff line at a point a few miles from both the Illinois and Spoon Rivers with a magnificent view of the rivers.

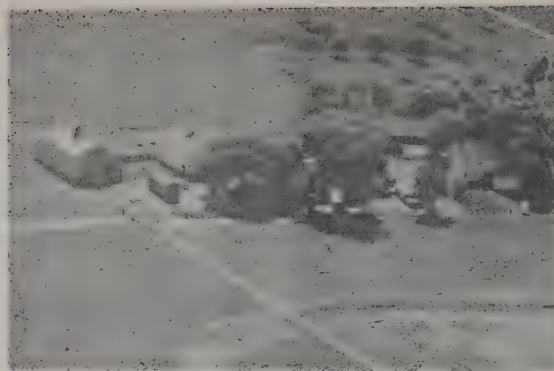

In 1927, Dr. Don F. Dickson conceived the idea of leaving the contents of the mound in situ, or as they were buried. With the assistance of his father, Thomas M. Dickson, and Marion H. Dickson, he began a scientific excavation of the site. The work was done with extreme care with trowels, orange sticks and small brushes used exclusively in working around the skeletons, pottery and other artifacts. The work reached such proportions that a shelter had to be built to protect the excavations from the elements. Today a 46 by 76 foot tile building covers the area.

In November, 1945, the State of Illinois acquired this site, and it is now known as the Dickson Mounds State Park.

LEWISTOWN

As the history of Lewistown, county seat of Fulton County and that county's third largest city, is mainly the history of the county itself, many references to it will be found in the opening narrative of this book. The city is located in the center of Lewistown Township and has a population of 2,630. The population of the township is 3,237.

In addition to several railroads, Lewistown is served by US 24 and state highways 97 and 100. It is a typical Midwest county seat town, with shaded residential streets surrounding an ornate county courthouse. Lewistown was the boyhood home of the late Edgar Lee Masters, distinguished American Poet and author of Spoon River Anthology.

In one of the early courthouses here Abraham Lincoln often appeared in law cases. In that same courthouse Stephen A. Douglas once sat as a judge. As we have already seen, the first settler of Lewistown was Major Ossin M. Ross, who also was the founder of Fulton County.

LIVERPOOL TOWNSHIP

It was in Liverpool Township that a village called Liverpool was laid out on the Illinois River in 1836 and that its founders thought would become as important a shipping point in central Illinois as the original Liverpool is in northern England. But when the railroads came in the middle 1850's and none was built through Liverpool, the village subsequently declined.

Today, the site of the former village is a commercial fishing port. Around it are a number of private hunting lodges, this region being noted for its plentiful supply of ducks each fall. Not far from the river port of Liverpool is located the famous Dickson Mounds State Park. The population of Liverpool Township today is 1,057.

The first settlers of Liverpool Township, who came in 1826, were Charles Deprest, Joseph Allen and wife, John Farris and family, Francis Smith and family and Seth Hilton and family. In 1849 a cholera epidemic broke out in the township and took the lives of thirteen persons. The area was organized into a township in 1850, with Jacob Maus as first supervisor.

ORION TOWNSHIP

Situated at the northeast corner of Fulton County, Orion Township is a fully-developed farming community of 789 population. Among the first settlers of the township were John Wolf, John Orendorff and William Ulmer and their families, all of whom arrived about 1828.

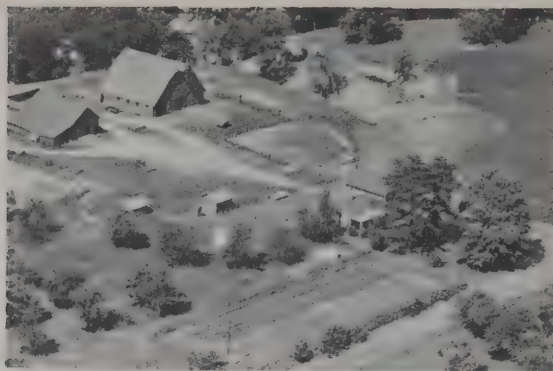

Another early settler was Jonas Rawalt, who became first supervisor of the township after it was organized in 1850 and who was re-elected to that post continuously for the next ten years. An early settlement of the township was Rawalt's Station, which Jonas Rawalt established on the Toledo, Peoria & Warsaw railroad.

Still another pioneer settlement in the township was Breed's Station, laid out on the Toledo, Peoria & Warsaw railroad by C. G. Breed, an early settler. The first saw mill in Liverpool Township was erected by Gabriel Walling on the west branch of Copperas Creek.

Principal trading and social center of Pleasant Township is Ipava, a village established more than a hundred years ago. It has a population of 667, while that of the township is 1,199. Ipava is located on US 136 and on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad.

The village was laid out in 1846 by John Easley and at first was called Pleasantville. One of the earliest churches here was built in 1854 by the Methodists at a cost of $2,000. In 1858 the Presbyterian church was erected, also at a cost of $2,000. During the 1870's the village consisted of three churches, three blacksmith shops, two hotels, two public halls, two furniture stores, two wagon shops, a bank, schoolhouse, flour mill, drug store and newspaper plant.

First to settle in Pleasant Township was William Roland, who arrived in 1828. Later that year there came James and Riley Roland, as well as Daniel Walters, Daniel Brown and a few others. After Pleasant Township was organized in 1850, the first supervisor was J. P. Montgomery.

C U B A

In 1834 an early settler, Ephraim Brown, came to future Putnam Township and laid out a village he called Middletown. Two years later, a group of other early settlers, composed of Joel Solomon, D. W. Vittum, Samuel Brooks and T. B. Coggsell, arrived in the same vicinity and platted another village; one they called Centerville. In the years following, the two villages grew together and eventually were given the single name of Cuba. How this name originated, local historians do not say.

Today, Cuba has a population of 1,482, while that of Putnam Township is 2,025. State highways 97 and 95 form a junction in Cuba. At one period in its history, Cuba was on the line of the Fulton County Narrow Gauge Railway, a line that ran from Fairview to Havana. An early historical work says that Cuba "is very pleasantly situated in the midst of a fine agricultural district, and is one of the leading places of the county at which coal is mined."

Putnam Township is named after Reading Putnam, first settler, who came in 1823, or the same year in which Fulton County was organized. First supervisor of the township, after it was organized in 1850, was H. S. Hyatt.

AVON

In the far northwest corner of Fulton County lies the village of Avon, which was founded a century ago. It is on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, and also on State 41. The population of Avon is 870, while that of the township in which it is located, Union, is 1,340.

Avon was founded in 1854 by R. Woods, O. H. Woods and D. N. Wright. At first the name of the village was Woodville, but this was changed to Woodstock when another "Woodville" was found in Illinois. Then, later, another "Woodstock" was found in Illinois, and once again a new name was adopted -- Avon. Two early settlements of Union Township which have since disappeared were Troy and St. Augustine.

First settlers of the township, who arrived in 1828, were Robert Grant, Isaac Hulick and a Mr. Betson. A later settler was Eloy D. Mailiard, who was born and reared in France and who, through family connections, was a personal friend of Emperor Napoleon 1st.

VERMONT

Although the village of Vermont, which now has a population of 940, was founded more than a hundred years ago by two Kentuckians, James and Joseph Crail, it was a native of the Green Mountain State, Abitha Williams, who suggested the name "Vermont," in honor of his own state. It is said that he offered a barrel of whiskey to prospective buyers of lots in the new village for the opportunity of naming it.

The village of Vermont was laid out by the Crail brothers in 1835 on an eighty-acre tract they had earlier purchased in what afterwards became Vermont Township. The first house in the village was built by James Crail, and the first store building was erected by G. Reeves. An early organization here was the Vermont Library Association, formed by leading ladies of the village.

After Vermont Township was established in 1850, the first supervisor was Thomas Hamer. Believed to be the first settler of the township was Moses Davis, who came about 1832 and who built a log cabin about half-a-mile southwest of where Vermont village was later located.

WATERFORD TOWNSHIP

It was in this township, located at the mouth of the Spoon River, there came to live the first permanent settler of Fulton County. He was John Eveland, who arrived here with his family in 1820. He located on a tract of wooded land just above the point where Waterford village was afterwards built. At a later date he moved to another township.

A one-time promising village in the township here was Waterford. It was laid out in 1825 by John Jackson, and he expected that it would become an important river shipping point. But when the railroads came in the middle 1850's and by-passed Waterford, the village declined and eventually became a "ghost town" on the Spoon River.

Several earthworks of the prehistoric "mound builders" were discovered in Waterford Township in after years. The township today is entirely devoted to agriculture and its population is 346.

WOODLAND TOWNSHIP

Woodland Township, at the south end of Fulton County, derives its name from the thick stand of timber that existed here when the first settlers arrived. But this timber was early cleared away, and today the township is a rich and fertile farming area. Its population is 843.

A pioneer village of the township is Summum. It was laid out in 1851 by James M. Onion, who gave it the name of Oberlin. But as it was the home place of a local character named Peter Summy, who was an early settler and sometime postmaster, residents of the township continued to call it "Summy" or "Summum." And this name finally became fixed to the village laid out by James Onion.

When Woodland Township was organized in 1850, its first supervisor was N. Veatch. Other "first" public officials were Amaziah Howard, town clerk; Stephen Merrill, assessor; and Simeon Veatch, collector.

In Young Hickory Township lies the village of London Mills, part of which is in Fulton County and part in adjoining Knox County. That part of it in Fulton County has a population of 558. It is situated on State 116 near the confluence of Cedar Creek and Spoon River.

An early settlement in Young Hickory Township was Midway, and at one time it contained forty inhabitants. But it declined in later years and eventually its place in the township was taken by London Mills, which had its beginnings in a general store and two blacksmith shops at the north end of the township.

Some local historians claim that Laban Reynolds was the first settler of the township, while others state that John Beer should be given that honor. It is not known when Reynolds first came. But John Beer arrived in 1829. Later that same year there came Thomas Hummell. The first supervisor of the township, after it was organized in 1850, was J. Wallack.

Congress may admit as many new states as desired.

One State cannot undo the act of another.

By the Constitution every citizen is guaranteed a speedy trial by jury.

A person who commits a felony in one State cannot find refuge in another.

Treaties with foreign powers are made by the President and ratified by the Senate.

The territories each have a delegate to Congress who is allowed the privilege of debate, but not the right to vote.

The Vice-President, who ex-officio presides over the Senate has no vote in that body except in case a tie ballot.

If the President holds a bill longer than ten days while Congress is in session it becomes a law without his signature.

An act of Congress cannot become a law over the President's veto except on a two-thirds vote of both houses.

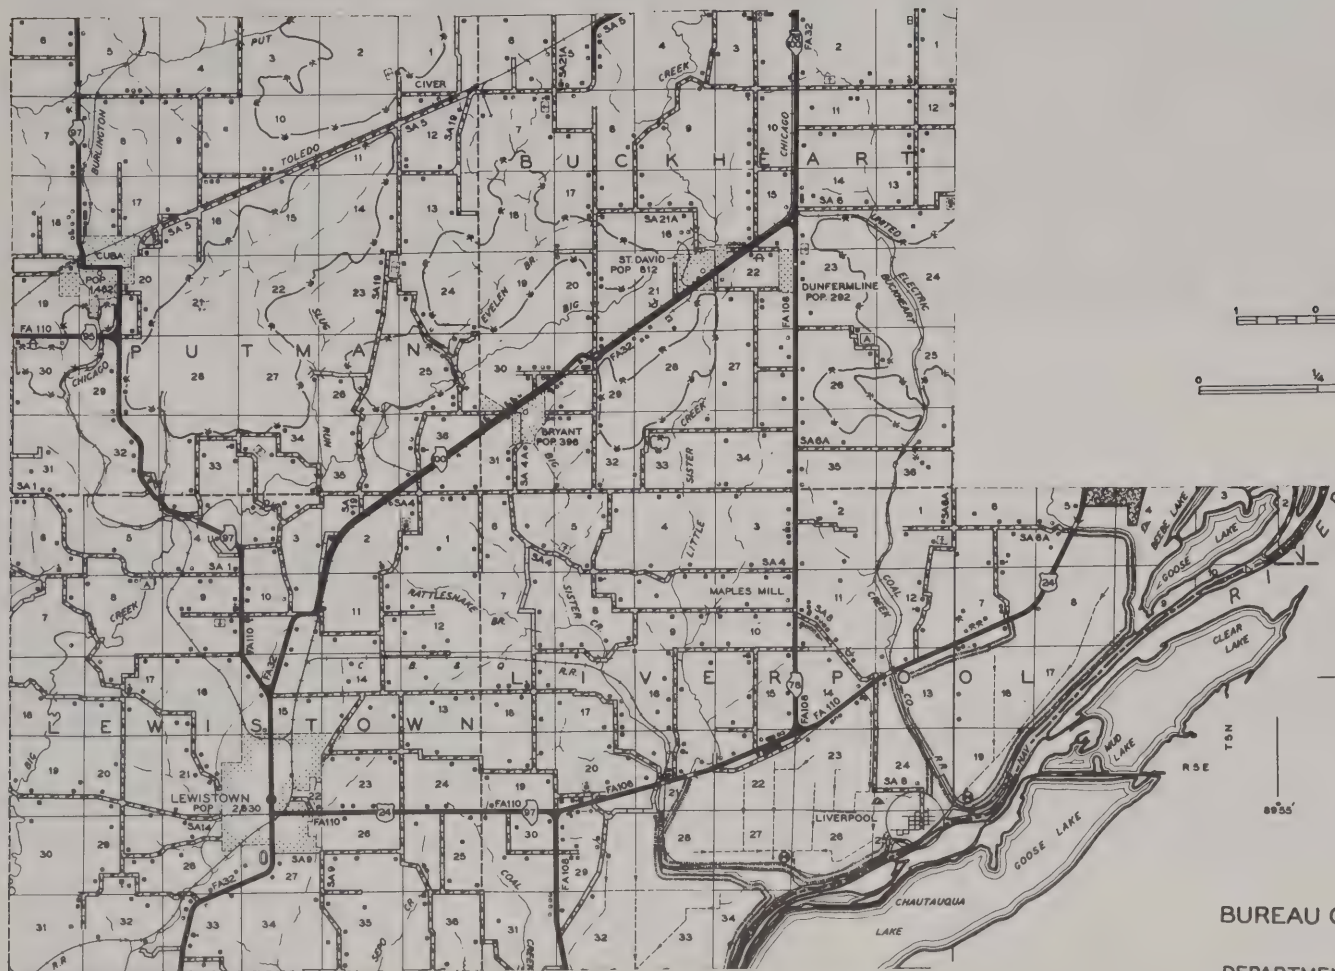

The House of Representatives may impeach the President for any crime, but the Senate has the sole power to try all impeachments.

Amendments to the Constitution of the United States require a two-third vote of each House of Congress, and must be ratified by at least three-fourths of the States.

The President of the United States must be at least 35 years of age; a Senator, 30; a Congressman, 25; The President must have been a resident of the United States fourteen years.

A naturalized citizen is not eligible to the office of President of the United States. A male child born in a foreign land to American parents has an equal chance to become the President with one born on American soil.

The United States shall guarantee to every State a Republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion, and on application of the Legislature or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic trouble.

Knots and Miles

Source: United States Coast and Geodetic Survey

The U. S. Statute Mile is 5,280 feet in length. On the Continent most of the old miles, which varied in length from about 3,300 feet to over 36,000 feet, have been replaced, officially at least, by the kilometer, which equals 0.6214 statute mile or 3,280.8 feet.

The Nautical, Geographic, or Sea Mile at any place is considered, for purposes of navigation, to be equal to the length of one minute of latitude at that place.

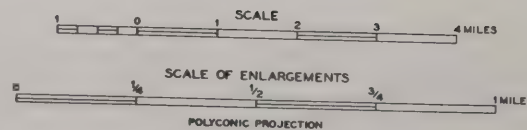

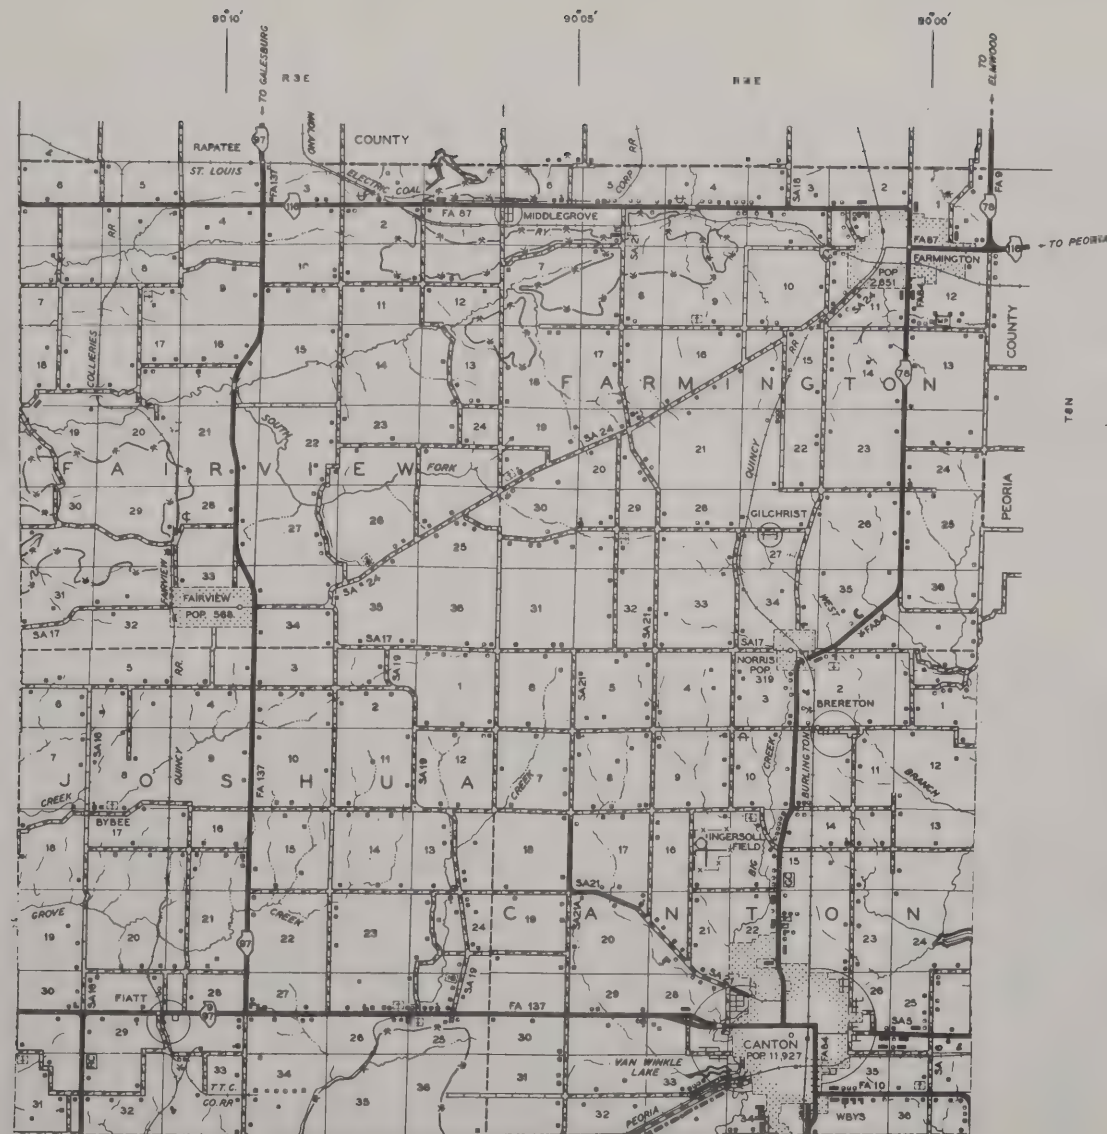

The U. S. Nautical Mile is 6,080.20 feet in length and equal to one-sixtieth of a degree of a great circle of a sphere whose surface is equal in area to the area of the surface of the earth (Clarke's spheroid of 1866).

The Knot is a measure of speed; a speed of one knot being a speed of one nautical mile an hour.

A Nautical Mile — 1.1516 statute miles; a Fathom — 6 feet; a Cable — 100 fathoms or 600 feet or approximately 0.1 nautical mile.

To convert statute miles into nautical miles, multiply statute miles by 0.8684; to convert nautical miles into statute miles, multiply nautical miles by 1.1516, or roughly 11/7.

United States Air Forces and the Navy use the knot as the standard aeronautical unit of speed and the nautical mile as the corresponding unit of distance.
